INTRODUCTION

This booklet is one of a four part series to assist and support the community in creating a viable and mutually beneficial homesharing arrangement.

This is Booklet 1, “What is homesharing and is it right for me?” which provides a basic overview of homesharing to help you decide if it is a right fit for your needs.

Other booklets include topics on how to start a homesharing arrangement, tips for new seekers, and tips for new providers. All of these guides are available for pick-up at the A1AA office or online at www.a1aa.org/homesharing.

HOMESHARING BASIC INFORMATION

WHAT IS HOMESHARING

Homesharing is an arrangement where two or more unrelated people share a dwelling, each having their private space and sharing certain common areas. Providers may arrange a regular rental payment, or exchange services to offset a portion or all of the rent. No two homesharing situations are alike; each is tailored to the needs and desire of the individual people involved.

Home providers may be living in a house too large due to life changes (empty nest or loss of a spouse), or they may be a one-parent family finding it difficult to cope with maintaining a household alone.
Home seekers may be seniors, college students, newly divorced persons, professionals recently moved to the area or travelling, or anyone in need of lower cost housing who enjoys living with others.

WHAT HOMESHARING IS NOT

Homesharing is not meant to provide a home health service for the home provider. Home seekers are not expected to provide personal care services, which include but are not limited to:

- Bathing assistance
- Dressing
- Toileting assistance
- Turning or lifting
- Anything that brings the housemate in contact with bodily fluids
- Injections or administering medications

Homesharing is not meant to be used as emergency housing. Finding a compatible housemate and setting up a new homesharing arrangement takes time, sometimes several weeks or more.

Homesharing is not meant to be a short term situation. Many home providers prefer a longer term commitment. Be sure to be clear and open about your housing needs.

COMMON TYPES OF HOMESHARING

In a rental arrangement, the home provider will rent out a spare bedroom for extra income.
In a service exchange arrangement, the home provider may offer a rent-free room in exchange for services such as transportation, cooking, housekeeping, laundry, running errands, yard work, handywork, companionship, or pet care.

In a mixed arrangement, the home provider will offer a reduced rent to be offset by services.

IS HOMESHARING RIGHT FOR ME?

CHARACTERISTICS OF A SUCCESSFUL HOMESHARER

- A commitment to the decent treatment of housemates – combined with enough self-awareness to evaluate and possibly modify one's own behavior in order to honor the same commitment on the part of others.

- Genuine interest in your housemate – which doesn't mean that you have to share their interests, hobbies, etc. but seeing them clearly and honestly can be helpful.

- "Privacy AND company are essential -- and you can drive someone crazy by depriving them of either." This quote, by science fiction author Robert Heinlein, can make a huge difference in almost any relationship if everyone involved will take it seriously and adjust their behavior as needed.

- Tolerance and flexibility – It's crucial to be aware of, and willing to enforce, your own "showstoppers." But it's also worth challenging these from time to time. Some of them might not be as essential as you had thought. This can lead to some interesting negotiations: "I tend to be on the casual side about housekeeping, but I'll do my best to keep things neat if you'll be willing to keep the noise down after, say, 10 pm."

It's REALLY important to NOT be perfect! When things go wrong -- and sooner or later, they will -- looking at the situation 100% objectively can go a long way toward coming to a solution. This means recognizing how your own behavior may be part of the problem. Practice saying "I goofed" or "I blew it" -- and notice that the world doesn't come to an end!

REFLECTION QUESTIONS

- What kinds of things do I do that would make it easy for someone else to be comfortable living with me? And how can I do even more of those things?
- What are some things that I do that might make it harder for a housemate to be comfortable around me? What can I do to improve those areas?
- How willing am I to be flexible and accommodating?
- How comfortable am I with change?

OTHER THINGS TO CONSIDER

Do some of your own research at the library, online, or ask friends and family what they think. For internet resources, use the “More Information” section.

I’M READY TO START, NOW WHAT?

Complete an application for the Northcoast Homeshare Program. Applications can be found on the website (www.a1aa.org/homesharing) or by contacting the A1AA office. Staff at A1AA can guide you through this process if you need more help.

A1AA NON-LIABILITY STATEMENT

Area 1 Agency on Aging (A1AA) and its staff or other representatives only act as facilitators in the matching process. Northcoast Homeshare does not perform credit checks, verify income or ability to pay and only verifies physical and mental health status through personal reference checks (3). It is the responsibility of the individual participants to determine whether referred individuals are found to be compatible. All final decisions regarding homesharing are voluntary and rest with the parties to the homeshare agreement. Background and reference checks are limited in nature and are not guaranteed to catch every violation.
